from the guides. I was leaving Naples for Rome the same day and before going bought a photograph of 10. Whatever of imperfection there was in the bust was not effect more pleasing-indeed, more beautiful, for by this time a beauty I did not at first perceive had grown Blanchard Block, 20 and 22 No. Main St., One Price Men's and Boyo' Outfitters. upon me wonderfully. In Rome I put the photograph on my mantel, and before long it held my constant gaze. A month passed. My photograph had become my idol. Day after day the beautiful, highborn face on which was stamped the soul of one used to command looked at me till it became a reality. At times it seemed as if she would speak to me. Yet I dreaded that she should lest she address me as a slave. At last, frightened at the unslave. At last, frightened at the un-controllable longing that was taking An possession of me, I locked my photograph in my trunk. An hour later I took it out and placed it again on my mantel. One night, not being able to sleep from desire to gaze on the face of my empress, as I spoke of her to myself, I got out of bed, lighted the gas and gave myself up to the spell till at last, feeling that I must tear myself away from her, I dressed and went out to the street. At the end of a broad avenue I descended a flight of steps and stood against the rall about Trajan's melons are lower and all forum. It was past midnight, and, seeing no one, I climbed down into the lower level and walked toward the column set up by Trajan in commemoration of his victories.

Some one was sitting on a fragment at its base. I was about to turn away when I saw it was a woman. Curious to know who could be there so late at night, I approached. As I did so she raised her face, and by the street lights above I saw that she was-my Instinctively I knelt before ber.

"They have desecrated this column," she said. "They have replaced the statue of the emperor by that of a lowborn fisherman called Petrus, one of the ignominious sect of Christians who deny the immortal gods and would place in their stead a Jew who was crucified when Tiberius reigned. If you love me take down this Petrus. You cannot put back the emperor's statue, for they have destroyed H, but you can rid Rome of the sight of this Charon and his ferry on the Styr. Do this and you shall be honored by the love of Platina."

That I might win the love of my empress brought a delight more fierce than I could endure. For a time I must have lost consciodaness, for in the morning I was knocking at the door of the porter at my apartments, and he asked me as I passed in if I were ill.

They tell me that the next night I was found by the police vainty endeavoring to throw a looped rope over the statue of St. Peter on Trajan's column from a neighboring building. I was arrested and turned over to my friends as a crazy American. They have shut me up in this place and will not let me out. I begged them to give me the picture of my empress or I would really go mad. The physician in charge here for a time forbade my having it, but at last, after I had tried to kill myself, he consented, and since then I have borne my imprisoument more resignedly.

I was told lately that they consider me in a way to recover, for they will not be convinced of my saulty. They tell me that I am cruzed through love of a woman who has been dead eighteen centuries; that my ompress was Pintina, wife of Trajan, emperor of Rome during the first century; that she lived in the palace of the Caesars, served by 1,500 attendants-indies, gentlemen, freedmen, slaves; that I should see all this in her imperial features and not aspire even if she lived today to one so exulted.

This may be true, but I doubt not that had I been permitted to pull down Peter's stutue I should possess her either here or hereafter.
